With support for reading files from popular productivity suites, iteAAAs a convenient way to take the office anywhere you go. DoneAAAt do much editing. Do lots of annotating and Pdf Expert is solid with enough options to make it adaptable to most every document. I suspect if I did I might find PDF Expert app a pretty good note-taking tool. What I really enjoy is the overall reading and annotating experience. The Readdle file management is probably my favorite so far as well (meaning I like it better than Adobe Reader if your looking for comparisons). The Readdle apps seem to do a good job (better than others at least) of having options available in the eAAAShareAAAs menus(s). In short Readdle appears to make a good effort at utilizing the full capacity of iOS 11 as far as this neophyte can tell. Wish all PDF developers would think outside of the PDF-box more sometimes but IeAAAm probably asking for the impossible. Ignorance is bliss IeAAAVE heard. I suspect many problems I and other users have with Apps in general are more likely the fault of AppleAAAs never ending updates and tweaks which take time to find and adapt to for the Apps. LeteAAAs face it. Apple doesneAAAt make it cheap to own and stay up to date with their mobile tech if you want to run various types of hardware. As such IeAAAd tend to favor a well established company for my PDF environment. Readdle fits that description as well as or better than most PDF app developers without being a slow moving indifferent 800 pound gorilla (leave to the reader to guess who that might be in this context). Hello, sorry to hear about your recent experience! Please send us a short video to rdsupport@readdle.com so that our engineers can learn more about it. Thank you in advance.
